¹ H1-B filing fees include $325 (I-129 non-immigrant petition) and $500 (anti-fraud fee), when applicable.
